PortaPanels Offer Tremendous Savings

Do the Math

The average cost for a temporary chain link fence around a construction project is $4 to $5 per lineal foot, plus 15% more per month after 10 months, plus back charges for any damaged panels. If instead, you buy your own PortaPanel fence, shipped to you in components with very little assembly and set-up cost, you will be able to pay for it within 2 or 3 projects and you can expect more than 10 years of service from your PortaPanels.

PortaPanels will free you from paying again and again for rental fence!

PortaPanels Make Sense

When you approach a construction site, the first thing you notice is not the heavy construction equipment or the in-process excavation activity. No! It's the worn out, over-used temporary fence panels brought to the site by the rental fence contractor.

By contrast, Ameristar's unique patent pending PortaPanel frame design utilizes the efficient shape of square steel tubes to harness the perfectly recessed chain link fabric. This smooth, protrusion-free profile is a vast improvement in appearance over tired-looking rental panels. If that's not enough, PortaPanels are not only available in the standard galvanized finish, but also in polymer-coated accent black and construction orange.

The convenience of owning your PortaPanel perimeter fence offers huge advantages over renting temporary fence. With PortaPanels, you don't have to wait for delivery from an outside rental service. Moreover, you can control the set-up schedule and secure large jobsites quickly. When job size is small or location is distant, you can avoid excessive trip charges. When a project is finished, you can move them to the next jobsite, without having to pay back damage charges.
